

Riga, the capital city of Latvia, is increasingly embracing sustainability and green initiatives to enhance its environmental footprint and improve the quality of life for its residents and ...

the school environment Through children, create awareness in families about the principles of energy efficiency Creating a change in habits in the wider Riga society Applies not only to electricity, water, ...

Residents were then invited to explore Riga's green courtyards and hear stories from those living alongside these urban oases. The walk encouraged participants to consider how their ...

Riga aims to become a green city by prioritising environmentally-friendly commuting, access to care, and resilient urban ecosystems.

The Riga City Council will take the recommendations into account when developing the Riga Urban Greening Plan. For the Riga Citizens' Climate Assembly, 35 Riga residents of different age groups, ...

Being kind to nature and living with the seasons is deeply ingrained in the DNA of Rigans, so, exploring the city in an eco-friendly way is a breeze. From sustainable shops to eco-conscious cafés, here's ...

The City of Riga is taking steps towards a circular economy. Its Sustainable Energy and Climate Action Plan 2030 (SECAP) promotes circular practices in the construction and energy sectors.

ries a large share of the country's burden when it comes to reducing impacts on climate and adapting to change. However, it also means that Riga's city administration can have a significant impact on the ...

Riga's new target is to achieve a 53% CO₂ emissions reduction compared to 2019, which at the same time means a CO₂ emissions reduction by 80% compared to 1990 and the achievement of climate ...

This report was developed by the Riga Energy Agency in collaboration with the NGO Green Liberty and the consultancy firm.

Web: <https://www.inalaaccelerator.co.za>